Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1400 on Thursday 20 May 2021

UK Outlook for Tuesday 25 May 2021 to Thursday 3 Jun 2021:
Unsettled weather continues through the start of next week, with widespread showers mainly across Central and eastern England. As next week progresses there is a chance of more settled conditions gradually becoming established from the west. Rain and showers likely becoming confined to the east, leaving drier and less windy conditions elsewhere. Temperatures look likely to remain slightly below average, though feeling pleasant in any sunshine. Some notably chilly nights are still possible, with some late season frost possible in prone spots. Becoming more uncertain into the following week, but indications most likely suggest a continuation of drier weather for most. Temperatures possibly increasing slightly closer to normal, but there is a risk of a few showers around and a return of rain bands into the west at times.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.